GRAYLING, MICHIGAN.

O. PALMER, PROPRIETOR.

A TROLO ON THE FLOOR.

BY WILLIAM DAUGHTON.

What's the matter with you, neighbor?

Is there any reason why that you're looking so queer?

Why, you look as if you wanted to go to bed, and you're not even tired.

Well, you look as if you wanted to go to bed, and you're

not even tired.

Well, you look as if you

wanted to go to bed, and you're

not even tired.

Well, you look as if you

wanted to go to bed, and you're

not even tired.

Well, you look as if you

wanted to go to bed, and you're

not even tired.

Well, you look as if you

wanted to go to bed, and you're

not even tired.

Well, you look as if you

wanted to go to bed, and you're

not even tired.

Well, you look as if you

wanted to go to bed, and you're

not even tired.

Well, you look as if you

MATTIE VAN WYCK'S STORY.

BY HETIE J. POTTER.

The fire burned low in the little house of the Van Wycks; nothing was heard but the ticking of the clock and the purring of the old gray cat. The night was frosty without, the full pine trees cast their long shadows across the snow; everything seemed so peaceful and so quiet, that Mattie Van Wyck, who was lying in bed, looking out of the window, stirred the scanty fire.

The Van Wycks were very well-to-do a few years back. Mr. Van Wyck having had quite a property left him, but being an easy-going man and not particularly diligent in his business, he had gradually slipped through his hands, and after selling his farm and paying his debts, left him but little.

He decided to go West, and finally settled on a Northern town, buying the little house which he had nearly all his money. He worked hard in the pineries and kept his family supplied from day to day, but from severe exposure, contracted a hard cold and died, leaving his wife and four children to the mercies of a northern winter.

The eldest child, Mattie, was a bright, energetic little girl of six. She was tending school in the village, and was giving up a while at least, and stay at home to help her mother, who by taking in sewing had kept the wolf from the door ever since her father's death.

Mattie had sat up later than usual to do her sums, and now, with her chin resting on her hands, sat looking in-terly into the fire, wondering what she should do. The clock struck eight, and she gave up for the night, and looking up the house, took her light and trotted off to bed.

The next day was Sunday. After the frugal breakfast, the dishes were washed, and the house put to rights.

Mrs. Van Wyck got the children ready for Sunday-school, combed their hair, made them look as neatly as possible, all except Johnnie, who was a sturdy little fellow with black eyes and red cheeks. He had played hard and stuffed out his boots, so he would have to stay at home for a while till Providence or Santa Claus sent him some new ones. He made up quite a hy, and a big tearful check as he looked out of the window after his sisters, but he must dry his eyes and be a good little boy, his mother said, "for some day he would be a man, and take care of them all."

Johnnie caught the idea at once, climbed down from the window and hushed himself, helping his mother by bringing in wood and various ways, and was very happy. The day passed quietly and pleasantly; the children came home each with a fresh new boot.

In the evening, as they were seated around the table reading, Mattie broke the silence by saying:

"Mother, I wish I could write a story. When I heard Lottie Foster telling her story, I thought I had an idea in my head. I wish I could write a story. When I heard Lottie Foster telling her story, I thought I had an idea in my head. I wish I could write a story. When I heard Lottie Foster telling her story, I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When

I heard Lottie Foster telling her story,

I thought I had an idea in my head.

I wish I could write a story. When
